CHICAGO, June 7.—McHale had just one bad inning in the second game between the New Yorks and the White Sox. It was sufficient to put his pals on the short end of a 4 to 0 score. That bad inning was the sixth, and three hits and a sacrifice were quite sufficient to have Manager Chance call out Caldwell.

McHale's bad inning was only one of the causes for the defeat. Urban Faber, a White Sox recruit, was the other. He held the visitors to three hits and no scores. So if McHale hadn't had a bad inning the New Yorks would not have won.

The game was played in terrific heat, and from the standpoint of comfort it was a pleasant afternoon for McHale. He got to the shower early. Hartzell followed him, but he wasn't comfortable. He took a crack on the shins from a pitched ball in the sixth and after playing one more inning was told that he was excused.

It certainly was a ball game for five innings. Both McHale and Faber were going like a cool spot.

The Sox got the jump on the Chances in the second. Collins opened this with a red hot drive which Truesdale partially blocked. He slowed it down just enough to make it roll into short right and the batter converted it into a double. Chase walked and Bode sacrificed. Schalk obliged with a hit and Collins came across with the first run of the game.

Little Fritz Maisel did the best he could do in the sixth, but he couldn't get the necessary assistance. He got on with two gone and immediately pitched second. Hartzell then took a crack on the shins and looked like a couple of runs. But Bode happened to be playing deep and he also had the necessary speed with the result that he captured the fly.

In the sixth half of the sixth Demmitt cracked a single to left as a starter, and Collins was there with the sacrifice. Bode came through with a hit and Demmitt scored standing up. Hal stole second and went to third on Bode's base hit. Then Caldwell came in and ran into a wall of trouble. The infield drove in and Bode pitched second. Schalk flashed the sign for the squeeze and bunted perfectly, scoring Chase. Peckinpach threw badly and Bode also scored while Schalk went to third. Caldwell fanned the next two men. The score: 2-0.
